Drukkerij Arijs in Belgium takes RMGT 970PF-8 into service

Founded in 1960 in the Flemish Ardennes, one of Belgium's most scenic regions, Drukkerij Arijs has grown from a one-man operation to a modern, specialized printing company over three generations. The company is located in Kluisbergen, home of the famous "Tour of Flanders" cycling race. Owner and general manager Mr. Ben Arijs learned the printing business from his father and continues his passion for the business.

After positive experiences with RMGT presses, including the RMGT 920ST-4, the company chose the new RMGT 970PF-8, an eight-color press. The machine's larger paper size (650 x 960 mm), advanced automation, and low cost of ownership were key factors in the decision.

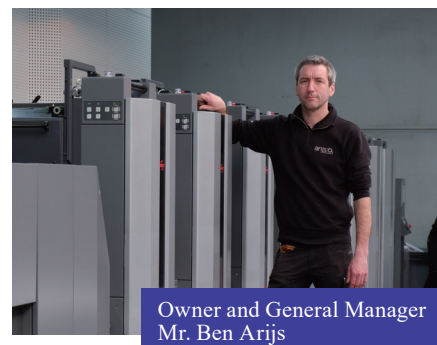

Arijs oversees the entire printing process, from concept and design to final production, offering high-quality offset and digital printing in B3 and large format. They also provide finishing services such as lamination, cutting, stitching, special folding, perfect binding, and metal foiling, aiming to deliver complete solutions to their customers.

Mr. Ben Arijs was determined that automation was essential to staying competitive in today's market. Therefore, he invested in the RMGT 970PF-8, equipped with full options like a simultaneous plate changer and Lithoflash inline color measurement system.

This investment expands Arijs' capacity and diversifies its offerings, enabling the company to reach a broader market. The press's low operating costs, reduced plate expenses, lower energy consumption, and high automation levels make it a highly effective growth tool for the business.

The RMGT 970 seamlessly integrates with the company's existing workflow, solidifying Arijs as a complete supplier of graphic products in the region. Installation and startup, managed by manroland Benelux's technical service, were smooth and efficient. Thanks to a detailed assembly and training plan, disruptions to production were minimized, and the press was up and running in just 10 days, in time for high-volume election print jobs.

After several weeks of production, both the printers and Mr. Ben Arijs are thrilled with the press's performance. The quality and productivity are exceptional.

"We are convinced this press is unmatched in terms of flexibility, reliability, and print quality. After a few months of production, I'm certain investing in the RMGT 970 was the right choice," said Mr. Ben Arijs.

Arijs places a strong emphasis on sustainability, ensuring their operations minimize environmental impact. This commitment is reflected in their choice of machinery, materials, and waste policies. With this smart investment, Drukkerij Arijs is well-equipped to thrive in the competitive printing industry.
